

USER PERSONA

SNAPSHOT

Name

Participant #4

Age

25-34

Occupation

Works from home

Background

This participant is currently working from home. They have a combination of dedicated home office and a desk in multipurpose room. They live with a partner/souse. When they are done work for the day, they turn off the monitor and leave the room. This participant feels that a mentor or a guide to help remind/give permission to be “off” work would be meaningful. Would like to have gentle reminders to take care of health

CHALLENGES

Main pain points:

- no time for self-care
- Needs clearer boundary about what is best for self.
- Work tools are visible, which reminds them of tasks left undone

Frustrations:

- Opens laptop to do “just one more thing” during personal hours (3 of 5)
- Checks or replies to work notifications during off hours (3 of 5)

When asked the question: If you could wave a magic wand, what is the single thing that would help you mentally or physically leave work behind at the end of the day? Participant responded: “Feeling confident that I got my work done and nothing needs to be worked on.”
